

Eagle Head

Rusty Johnson, Eastern Oklahoma Woodcarver's Association, created these drawings (free download available at eaglecane.com).

How Your Turning Club Can Help Honor Our Wounded Warriors

One way to get started creating an Eagle Cane for a wounded veteran is to contact National Program Director Jack Nitz (thehickoryhiker@gmail.com). Jack will offer advice, tips, and contacts with local carving clubs. He will also contact you to coordinate the placement of your canes with veterans from your home state. For more details, see eaglecane.com, which includes cane plans and an eagle-head tutorial. Finally, talk to your lumberyards and woodworking-supply companies to obtain donations.

Neil Kagan (NKagan1@aol.com) lives in Falls Church, VA. He's a member of the Capital Area Woodturners and the Northern Virginia Carvers.

A decorative transition collar separates the cane shaft from a carved bald eagle by Les Thomas, a member of the Northern Virginia Carvers.